

ENVIRONMENTS & SOCIALITIES IN OCEANIA

Practices of Transformation & Cooperation

25 June 2021

Online Workshop by Arno Pascht and Desirée Hetzel in cooperation with German Anthropological Association's (GAA) Oceania working group

People across Oceania experience and create transformations linked to processes of globalisation. Indigenous activism regarding climate change, the protectors of Mauna a Wakea in Hawai'i or calls for political self-determination in some Pacific states are prominent examples. Decisions about political and economic developments as well as questions of tradition/kastom and identity, or migratory movements concern the present as well as the future. An example is the debate around questions of indigeneity and power in Aotearoa New Zealand. It is characterised, according to Anne Salmond (2012), not only by discussions about the past, but also by “ontological quarrels” regarding human and more-than-human actors and life in total, or different assumptions about the guardianship of the environment (Salmond et al. 2019). There are many other examples from Oceania in which frictions mark encounters between members of governments, staff of non-governmental organisations or international aid programmes, indigenous activists and people living in rural and urban areas. To realise and acknowledge these potential frictions opens the way to dialogue; and to communicate about Pacific relational assumptions, for example, could stimulate conceptual shifts that may lead to the creation of new, shared ontological assumptions. This, in turn, may lead to changes in political process and legal principles, which have the potential to meet future global social and environmental challenges.

This workshop is part of the research project ‘Localising global climate change policies in Vanuatu: Reception of knowledge and socio-cultural transformations’ at the Institute of Social and Cultural Anthropology, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München, funded by Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft.

Program

| Time | Presentation |
|--------------------|--|
| 9.00 | Welcome and Introduction |
| 9.15-10.00 | Keynote: Let the River Speak: Working across 'Worlds' for Socio-ecological Transformation (working title) Anne Salmond & Dan Hikuroa |
| 10 min break | |
| 10.10-10.35 | The Platformization of Ritual Economics: Indigenous Encounters with Nature 2.0 (Pre-recorded) Stephanie Hobbis, Alex Soete & Geoffrey Hobbis |
| 10.35-11.00 | Fiji Islander Sociality in Urban and Migrant Environments: The Case of Fijian Professionals Sina Emde & Dominik Schieder |
| 11.00-11.25 | Large-scale Land Transformations and Changing Sociality among the Wampar in Papua New Guinea Tobias Schwörer |
| 10 min break | |
| 11.35-12.00 | Women's Active Engagement with the Sea through Fishing in Fiji Elodie Fache |
| 12.00-12.25 | Tackling Knowledge and Power: an Environmental Justice Perspective on Climate Change Adaptation in Kiribati Silja Klepp and Hartmut Fünfgeld |
| 12.25-12.50 | Foodways over the Life-course. (Re-)Engaging Environment and Sociality in a Papua New Guinea World Anita v. Poser |
| 12.50-13.15 | Ethnographic Explorations into Acoustemologies of Hope: Some Suggestions on How to Listen 'Care-Fully' in Times of Crisis Carsten Wergin |
| 13.15-13.30 | Final discussion |